form. It is important to realize that no one item or items is required. Reasonable documentation in your circumstances is expected. Tips For When to Seek Professional Advice Common-law couples may benefit from professional advice where: It is not clear whether the relationship qualifies as common-law, for example, you have lived together off and on, but never for 12 continuous months. You are not sure of the precise date when the common-law union started. You did not change your address when you moved in with your partner. You have lived together for 12 months but were apart for short periods. You declared on earlier immigration forms you were single when in fact you were common-law. Although you meet the definition of common-law status, you have almost none of the standard documents to corroborate that. You did not declare yourself as common-law to Canada Revenue Agency when filing taxes. You are not certain how to fill out the IMM 5409 properly. Common-law unions can be straightforward in some cases but difficult to prove in others, depending on how the relationship evolved. It is extremely important to be accurate on the Statutory Declaration of Common-Law Union not only to avoid problems and delays but to ensure you obtain the immigration benefits available to you as a couple. The Way Immigration can help you be successful. Thus, the extra formality of the Statutory Declaration of Common-Law Union lends more weight to your statements, as it is a criminal offence to make a false declaration in a Statutory Declaration. Instructions for Filling out the IMM 5409 First, ensure you meet the common-law criteria as above. Fill out the form, but do not sign or date it until you are in front of the public official. It can either be typed or completed by hand in black ink. Use your full legal names, exactly as shown on your passport. The IMM 5409 requires the number of the continuous years you As a couple, with the start and end dates. The start date is when you moved together a "not when you started out. quotes.
